A Communist administrative unit, the Kiangsu-Anhwei Border Region, which included the portion of Kiangsu Province north of the Yangtse River and the portion of Anhwei Province cast of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, has been made into two separate administrations: the North Kiangsu Administrative Office and the Chiang Huai (II 洋) Administrative Office。 Both new divisions are subordinate to the Central China Military Command, which functions as a military and political control agency.

- Co-extensive with each administrative office is a military district, and parallel co-extensive divisions are maintained throughout the government down to village level. The North Kiangsu Administrative Office and the North Kiangsu Military District control, respectively, nine administrative bureaus and nine military sub-districts. Each of these, in turn, is made up of four or five subordinate bureaus and four or five military sub-sub-districts. Correlation is maintained because the sub-district military commander is also head of the corresponding administrative bureau.
- 3. Officials of the North Kiangsu government include:

Head of the Administrative Office: NO Hsi-ming (質希明)

(張/震東) Commanding General: CHANC Chem-tung

Political Commissioner: CH'ANG T'ang-ch'ing (常 崇清)

Deputy Political Commissioner and chief political officer of the military district: HSIAO Wang-tung (蕭 望東)。

The North Kiangsu government has administrative and military control of fortyone hsien including the following:
